

International Excision Surgeon Listing

Last Updated: August 14, 2024

The patient-to-patient surgeon list is generated through recommendations from patients who have had surgery with that surgeon and report a good outcome. It does not guarantee the surgeon's skill. We support excision of endometriosis as opposed to ablation, especially with deeply infiltrating disease. This list is a good place to start, but you should investigate thoroughly for yourself. A list of things to look for in a non-Nook surgeon can be found in the File called "Interviewing a New Doctor for Endometriosis: Questions for your Doctor or Surgeon".

Please use the Search box to find feedback about any list doctor you are considering. We look at whether patients are treated respectfully, and if doctors are willing to work with them on referrals for pelvic pain if endo was not the only source of pain. A few doctors have been removed from the list when problems cropped up and the doctor did not return patient calls or provide a referral for other options such as pain management or pelvic physical therapy.

Not all doctors accept insurance, but this does not mean you do not have coverage as most hospitals do accept insurance and most doctors' offices will help with billing for insurance for out of network coverage, though you may have direct responsibility for the balances. Generally they want to evaluate your records before giving you an idea about costs, each case is different due to areas of disease involvement so other members cannot give you any idea of what your costs will be.

We encourage you to obtain your operative reports, pathology reports and discharge summaries plus any diagnostic reports from previous surgeries. You can get these by going to the hospital medical records departments and requesting them. Many doctors give you these reports at discharge but some do not. Keep a copy for your own records.

Before your surgery, discuss with your surgeon whether he/she has residents (new doctors in training) or fellows (often experienced surgeons who are advancing skills) who work with them and who will be performing your surgery. You should always ask about what happens if your surgeon encounters an issue outside of his/her skillset. Expert excision docs in pre-op planning often have general surgeon (or urology/bowel/thoracic, etc.) on standby to assist if necessary.

Although not all surgeons on the list have submitted bios to us, those who have can be found in the file: Biographies_SOME of the Physicians and Nurse Practitioners
